

voedlink

Why Kerala, Grampa?

(2010) Filmmaker Tom Chamberlin, Portland Oregon A 90 min documentary film about activism in one of the most progressive communities on the planet

donderdag 12 nov 2015 19.00-22.00 u

The Kerala Sastra Sahitya Paarishad (KSSP) with 100,000 volunteer activists has figured prominently in Kerala's struggle for economic fairness, education, democracy, women's rights and environmental protection.

Bill McKibben: "This small state in India, though not much larger than Maryland, has a population as big as California's and a per capita annual income of less than $300. It's infant mortality rate is low, it's literacy rate among the highest on Earth, and it's birthrate below America's and falling faster. Kerala's citizens live nearly as long as Americans or Europeans. Statistically Kerala stands out as the Mount Everest of social development; there's truly no place like it."

Locatie: Budapest, WG-terrein Pesthuislaan, links naast nr 2-98 door de tuin, trapje op

www.voedlink.nl
voor info mail: voedlink@gmx.com